Annex I
Description of Activities

Introduction

In recent years, the potential impact of trade liberalization on women and women's participation in trade in general has attracted greater attention in trade negotiations. Provisions relating to trade and gender equality increasingly feature in new-generation trade agreements. The power of inclusive trade to create better jobs and economic opportunities for women should stimulate competition and lead to greater exports and higher overall wages for women and men.

One way to empower women economically is to ensure that they benefit from inclusive trade by paying particular attention to removing barriers that hinder their meaningful participation.

To bring this program to fruition, BPW International and UN Women have identified the following approach.

Phase 1. Ecosystem building, including the creation of inclusive incubators when relevant

To enable more women to become successful entrepreneurs in trade at regional level and beyond, UN Women and BPW International propose to capitalize on multi-donor partnerships to offer specific support solutions, including incubation programs, that focus on improving the export capacity of formal and informal service providers, with particular attention to women's micro, small and medium enterprises to support their participation in inclusive trade.

In fact, the umbrella organization for women entrepreneurs and executives worldwide, BPW International, has noted that the support offered to women entrepreneurs is often not optimal for them, as these activities are ill-suited to their specific constraints. Women entrepreneurs are sometimes prevented from taking part in business development programs for a series of reasons. For example, the difficulty lies with incubator support structures, which do not have a good understanding of the specific needs of women entrepreneurs.

In this sense, the need to build more inclusive programs tailored to the needs of women entrepreneurs, and aimed at strengthening their ability to launch and develop businesses is necessary. It's time to get up to speed and act as a catalyst for women's potential. This is a key point of synergy and complementarity between BPW and UN Women strategies.
This dynamic can lead to the creation of ecosystem networks, including the establishment of inclusive incubators in a test phase.

Phase 2. Women's Trade Expos 2024

Building on the tested concept of Women’s Trade Expos (the first two "Connect and Create" Expo's held in Europe and Central Asia in 2021 and 2022 ¹, UN Women and BPW will seek to replicate this in other regions building on the results, performance and impact of Phase 1 to accelerate women entrepreneurs' access to trade. The Expo will consist of a series of local and cross-regional business creation, business launch/strengthening, networking, and capacity-building workshops enabling companies, investors and women entrepreneurs from the region to learn from and network with each other.

Phase 3. Extend the project to other regions

A third phase would be to extend the project to other regions. Countries and regions will be identified after the successful delivery of Phase 2.
